

1 Q. Facility Rehabilitation (Pooled), set out in Tab 1.1, is made up of the following:
2 Hydro Dam Rehabilitation:

3	Port Union Long Pond Spillway	$212,000
4	Tors Cove Forebay Spillway Rehabilitation	$191,000
5	Paddy's Pond Dam and Spillway	$381,000
6	Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service Failures	$578,000

8 Under the heading of Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service
9 Failures, please provide an inventory of replacement equipment at the beginning of 10 2010, an inventory at the end of 2010, and a listing, as well as purchase price, of 11 equipment that was replaced throughout the year. Please exclude Hurricane Igor
12 related costs for 2010.

13
14 A. *Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service Failures

15 The Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service Failures item involves the 16 refurbishment or replacement of structures and equipment due to damage, deterioration,
17 technical obsolescence and in-service failure. Equipment replaced under this item
18 includes civil infrastructure, instrumentation, mechanical, electrical, and protection and 19 controls equipment. This equipment is critical to the safe and reliable operation of 20 Newfoundland Power's generating facilities and must be replaced in a timely manner.

21
22 Replacements under this item are typically due to emergencies, failure of equipment
23 while in service, or observed deficiencies indicating risk of imminent failure. The cost
24 estimate is based upon historical expenditures.

25
26 Inventory of Replacement Equipment

27 Newfoundland Power maintains a very limited inventory of spare and replacement
28 generation equipment as many items are unique to each generator and turbine.¹ The 29 Company's requirement for spare generation equipment is determined based on 30 engineering judgement, and reflects its indirect impact on overall electrical system
31 reliability.²

32
33 The Company does maintain a centralized inventory of spare parts which would be
34 commonly used in multiple plants.³ This includes items such as programmable logic

¹ Unlike substations where the Company maintains a reserve of replacement equipment, typically equipment at generating plants is not generic enough for universal use. For example, it is not possible to stock an exciter or governor that could be installed on all generators. For a description of the inventory of spare and replacement substation equipment see response to Request for Information PUB-NP-013.

² Key mechanical equipment such as bearings, wicket gates and governor components, as well as electrical equipment such as breakers and windings, may be purchased as spares along with the original equipment. This spare equipment is typically unique to each generator and turbine and therefore stored on site at each facility. A comprehensive listing of this spare equipment stored on site is not readily available.

³ Spare parts inventory is largely comprised of components and materials which form part of a fully functioning piece of generation equipment, and which would typically be used in equipment repair. The spare parts may have been purchased with the original equipment under a capital project, purchased as part of the Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service Failures project, or purchased as an operating expense.

controller modules, position transducers, proportional valves, speed sensors, auxiliary switches, current transformers, fuses, cables and logic relays.

Attachment A provides a listing of the Company's current inventory of generation spare parts. The Company does not keep a history of the inventory of spare parts. Therefore, a listing of spare parts as of the beginning and end of 2010 could not be reconstructed within the time frame allowed for responses to requests for information.

2010 Equipment Replacements

Table 1 provides a listing of equipment replaced in 2010 through the Generation Equipment Replacements Due to In-Service Failures item, categorized by equipment type. Costs related to Hurricane Igor have been excluded.
